British Freighter Sees
Suspicious Craft Off St.
John's

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The British freighter Sheaf Crown last night sighted a "suspicious submarine" approximately 60 miles east of St. John's, Nfld.

Her call, heard here shortly before 7 p.m. M.S.T., said she was at latitude 47.52 north, longitude 50.34 west.

The 4,888-ton Sheaf Crown last night reported leaving Baltimore Dec. 18 for Land's End, England.

The freighter's call was the first indication that submarines might be operating in the area at the northern end of the Grand Banks.

St. John's is the site of one of the naval bases leased by the United States from Britain.

Maritime circles expressed the belief that it would be possible for a large on-going submarine to operate in the vicinity.

During the First Great War the German submarine Deutschland made two 30-day trips to the United States and returned to Germany with commercial cargo.

There have been numerous reports of Nazi submarine activity during the last year in the Caribbean and off the coast of South America.

Only 1 per cent of the accounts on dry roads involve kidnapping; on wet roads, the percentage is 27; on snowy roads, the percentage leaps to 30 per cent.

WAR AID BILL GOES TO HOUSE AFTER HEARING

First and foremost, the bill is a method of combating increased German submarine activity.

Knox told the committee "they are waiting the long-range weather forecasts for a period when they will have good weather for a long enough period to make a raid."

Knox said it was "well known" to believe that a negotiated peace would bring stability to Europe.

Knox said there had been a "big" in German airplane production in the last month or two, during which, he said, American and British planes had produced more planes than the German planes.

SEEK BETTER PLANE

This was due, he declared, to a "desperate" German search for a "New type of ship that will make all of the airplanes in the air now obsolete."

He described as "desperate" German search for a "New type of ship that will make all of the airplanes in the air now obsolete."

He said that the German navy was "capable" of producing more ships than the British navy.

"Then," he said, "if we find one design that will give us any other place in the world except the one we can turn them out by the hundreds."

Senator Guy Gillette (Dem., Iowa) asked Knox if it weren't true that even a strong navy would be difficult in overcoming shore batteries.

"That's what makes the attempt of invasion of England so dubious," Knox replied.

Gillette asked about a speech in which Grand Admiral Raeder of the German navy recently said Germany planned to become a world navy power.

When Gillette asked if the German navy was "capable" of producing more ships than the British navy, Knox replied:

"All through this war, we have heard things said out of Germany that we have said they were doing in 30 or 90 days they are doing and we are not doing."

He said that the German navy was "capable" of producing more ships than the British navy.

one objective of invading England," Knox added.

Knox recalled a recent suggestion for a negotiated peace by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and mentioned Lindbergh's assertion that the United States is not vulnerable to attack.

NOT ACCEPTABLE

"He has the greatest respect for Col. Lindbergh," Knox said. "He has great knowledge of commercial aviation, but his knowledge of military aviation has been slight. The conclusions he has drawn indicate that the United States is not vulnerable to attack."

Supporting the administration's aid-to-Britain bill, Knox said that the United States is not vulnerable to attack.

"A negotiated peace, can bring stability only when a military statement has been issued for a long time. The British people have reasonable confidence that the terms of the peace will be faithfully executed."

"I doubt that the British people would accept any German assurances at their face value."

As Knox testified, the house rules committee assembled to vote on a report that the bill is given number one priority, so House debate could begin Monday with chances for a final vote next Friday.

U. S. NEEDS TIME

Urging the Senate to hurry passage of the bill, Knox said that the United States needs time to build up its navy.

"Only Great Britain and the United States can give the world the help it needs to survive," he said.

"I believe a victorious Germany would move over to this hemisphere as soon as she could gain the strength to do so."

Knox said he was convinced the fear of Britain would "definitely carry with it the destruction of the United States."

Italo Soldier Has Little Enthusiasm For War In Which He Has No Stake

By BRIAN A. TOBIN

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(BUP)—Reports from the Albanian front, verified by the experience of British troops in the Italian campaign, show clearly that the Italian soldier has little personal enthusiasm for this war which he was told would put Fascism or Nazism on top of the world.

Frenchman Will Not Serve On Vichy Committee

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(CP)—Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, French aviator and author, disclaimed an invitation Thursday to serve on the committee appointed by the Vichy government in France to organize a new French army that would replace the former political parties of France. An announcement of his appointment to the committee was contained in a dispatch from Vichy Wednesday.

M. de Saint-Exupéry, who came to the country from France about a month ago, explained he "is not a politician," and that he prefers to exert each influence as he can through his writings.

Although not verified officially, he said he would have declined the present appointment if it had been confirmed.

BRITISH WIN IS NECESSARY WELLES SAYS

Nazi Victory Would Threaten the Peace Of America, Claim

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Questioning whether a negotiated peace now would "be worth the paper on which it was written," Welles said today that the secretary of state, said Thursday night that an Axis victory in Europe would lead to economic and political chaos in South America. He added that a "physical invasion" of that area would soon follow if these attempts were successful.

Welles described this as "more insidious danger than a mere attack directed against continental United States," and said "the menace to our security through the passage of the control of the high seas to unfriendly hands, is to my mind overwhelmingly apparent."

MUST RENDER AID

In an address prepared for the annual dinner of the Alumni Association of the New York University School of Law, Welles said that the United States must be prepared to render aid to Greece, China, and other nations. "All necessary assistance which America can produce," he said, "must be rendered."

"The provisions of the legislation now pending in the congress (the Lend-Lease measure), if enacted into law, would greatly facilitate that task," he said.

Welles said that the United States is "turning an aggressive policy in the far east," and that "we have played our line of defense in the western Pacific by the aid of the United States of America."

PEACE IN EUROPE

With reference to a negotiated peace in Europe, Welles said that the United States is "not in a position to render aid to Germany in any form."

"Under conditions in Europe today, no American public opinion could conceivably favor a negotiated peace which would sanction the continued existence of the nations now occupied by German military forces."

"From the recent of the German government of the past eight years, and in the light of the citation which I have read to you, it is possible to imagine that any peace arrived at under present conditions would be worth the paper on which it was written."

Taking up "arguments that no sounder course of the Atlantic coast as we are properly prepared to defend ourselves," Welles said that the United States is "not in a position to render aid to Germany in any form."

SASKATOON, Sask., Jan. 31.—(CP)—Premier Patterson, of Saskatchewan, in his first public speech since returning from the Dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa, Monday night told the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Board of Trade he was not going to place blame for the collapse of the conference and would make "no criticisms or reproaches or threats."

"The Siros report is not lost and the work put on it is not wasted," he said. "It will be the basis for the rebuilding of confederation in a more modern, more lasting and a fairer basis."

He said he did not go to Ottawa hoping or expecting that the report would be accepted in general, and the details of re-conference would be set at that time conference. "I merely hoped that some progress would be made and that the foundation would be laid for another conference perhaps six months hence."

"Even if there had been no opposition the job could not have been done at this conference," he said.

In concluding his speech, Patterson said that he was not going to place blame for the collapse of the conference and would make "no criticisms or reproaches or threats."

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE NEYER ELDRED

Mothers are given to hasty remarks which often wound the child deeply. He believes what we say. If we tell him he is a bad child, or a mean child, or a selfish one, he takes it at our word. And he may feel within himself that whatever his momentary behavior, or however it may look to the parent, he isn't any of these things, really.

Winifred, who is five, would not one night, for reasons known only to herself, wash herself and get into the bathtub. Having long ago become profuse in getting herself clean, this stubborn refusal to try to help herself, made her mother angry. She was tired, anyway. She had put Tommy to bed, after scrubbing him well, and she wanted to be through with Winifred and to get downstairs so she could read for the day.

"You're a bad girl not to wash yourself!" said mother, thoughtlessly.

A loud cry went up from Winifred. "Say I'm not a bad girl," she wailed. "Say I'm not."

"But you are, when mother is so tired and you can wash yourself! You are a bad girl not to help."

"But, anyway, say I'm not a bad girl," the child continued, almost hysterical in her pleading.

"Say it, say it!"

By this time mother was angry, too. "I can't say you are a good girl when you aren't," she persisted. "I'll say you are a good girl if you'll wash yourself, as you always do."

"Say it anyway, say it anyway," the child screamed, tears streaming down her face.

It was obvious to any observer that the child's sensitive feelings should have been appreciated and respected. Once she had become hardened in such unwillingness, that they caused no such an uproar, she would likewise be hardened in the idea of being bad and would presumably make no effort to be different.

Think twice before scolding the child with these blanket indictments. They should be qualified so that making it plain that it is only at the moment that she is being bad. Not a bad girl!

You may have no leaflet, "How to Manage the Child," but you are sending in your request with a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Eldred of the Vancouver and Mine department in care of this newspaper.

Let Labels Guide You When Buying Meat

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

When you buy Sunday's roast of beef be sure you are getting the grade of meat you pay for. The Department of Agriculture has set up new beef grades. You'll find these grade marks over and over again in the week-long life of the meat.

PRIME: The highest grade of beef. Domestic consumers rarely see it.

CHOICE: Highest grade of beef commonly available to consumers. These grades are relatively fat and should be marinated.

GOOD: This grade meets the needs of consumers who have small budgets and want the best quality they can get for moderate prices.

COMMERCIAL: For consumers who buy meat only if prices are below average. Has very little extra fat. Produced from steers and heifers and relatively young cows fed largely on grass or roughage.

UTILITY: Lowest government graded meat, usually available to consumers. Includes meats which are not tender but can be made palatable by spicing and imaginative cooking. It should be sold at the lowest price.

Questions and Answers

QUESTION—Mr. E. D. WITZ: "How is it possible for a person to find out if he has diabetes. What are the symptoms? Please answer in your column soon."

ANSWER—Diabetes is an insidious disease and if promptly recognized and treated in its incipient stage, the chances are that the patient will live a full life, and will probably die of some other disease.

The persistent presence of sugar in the urine is one of the most important signs that the patient may be diabetic, and this is then confirmed by other tests such as the blood sugar determination. Diabetes may be present and the patient know nothing of it, and as time goes on, there is loss of weight and an excessive thirst. Although there is a loss of weight, the patient is inclined to eat too much, and what he does eat, seems to do him no good.

He is usually weary and fatigued and is irritable. Insulin, plus a correct diet and other hygienic methods keep the condition under control, and the insulin is not a necessity in all cases by any means, for there are many cases where diet and other measures will accomplish the desired results. I am sending you Dr. Frank McCoy's two articles on the subject, titled "True Diabetes Mellitus" and "The Cure of Diabetes Mellitus." Those of my readers who would like to obtain copies, just address your request to the McCoy Health Service, enclosing a large, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in loose stamps.

DIAMONDS

A diamond is worth the money spent for it must have the following:

FIRST: You must have a gem stone and it must be cut and polished following the latest correct methods. You have in a diamond a top table that is the flat portion in the center of the top, the next is the girdle that is the outer side circumference, next, the apex that is the sharp point at the bottom, next, color and brilliancy and be free from fashions or bad carbon marks.

SECOND: It must be cut and polished by an expert. There are 38 facets on a full cut diamond, some are 56 plus a top table and apex. There are 32 facets and the table on the top that is to say, above the girdle and there are 24 facets and a piece cut off the apex which is below the girdle. Each facet must be an exact duplicate of its neighbor or shall we say, a duplicate of the one on the opposite side. The amount of diamond above the girdle must be in right proportion to the part of the diamond below the girdle, and both top and bottom must be in conformity to the diameter of which stone that is an cut and polished.

THIRD: For instance, a diamond weighing ten carats at $500 may be shown in price compared to our weight but one carat at $50. In the first instance you are paying for quantity without regard to the right proportion, the cut in the setting and polishing. In the second instance you are paying for the amount in quality, cutting and polishing.
